ABSTRACT

Information about Latin American studies programs was gathered from a questionnaire sent to the institutional members of the Consortium of Latin American Studies Programs (CLASP). This directory contains that information. Included is a description of 66 programs, indices for the disciplinary specialities represented by the faculty members in each program, for the field studies opportunities offered by 41 of the programs, and for the Latin Americanist faculty employed in these programs. CONSORTIUM OF LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES PROGRAMS (CLASP)

The Consortium is the national organization of institutions of higher education offering study related to Latin America. Formed in the fall of 1968, the Consortium provides the institutional dimension for the realization of the educational purposes of the Latin American Studies Association. Cooperative activities are arranged through the Steering Committee of the Consortium, while liaison is maintained through the Executive Secretariat of the Latin American Studies Association which serves both organizations. Annual dues for 1975 are $50.00. Since CLASP is in effect the institutional arm of LASA, CLASP members receive, in addition to CLASP publications, all publication of the Latin American Studies Association, including the Latin American Research Review, the LASA Newsletter, and occasional publications, without an additional charge above Consortium dues.

1975 CLASP Steering Committee: Doris J. Turner, chpn. (Kent State U.); Eugenio Chang-Rodriguez (Queens/CUNY); Carl W. Deal (U. of Illinois; John J. Finan (American U.); Philip F. Flemion (San Diego State U.); Marshall R. Nason (U. of New Mexico); G. Micheal Riley (U. of Wisconsin-Milwaukee); Philip B. Taylor, Jr. (U. of Houston); Miriam Williford (Winthrop Coll.).

PREFACE

In November, 1973, a questionnaire was sent to the institutional members of the Consortium of Latin American Studies Programs (CLASP) requesting information about their Latin American Studies programs for this Directory. During the subsequent six months, replies were received from 63 members who sponsor Latin American Studies programs, plus three members whose institutions do not have formal Latin American Studies programs.

This Directory thus included a description of 66 programs based on the data submitted by the representatives of each program. In addition, indices have been provided for the disciplinary specialities represented by the faculty members in each program, for the field studies opportunities offered by 41 of the programs, and for the Latin Americanist faculty employed in these programs.

The efforts of the representatives of the programs described herein are appreciated for providing, in most cases, very extensive information about each program. I am also grateful to the Anthropology Department and the M.A. Social Science Program at Northeastern Illinois University for making available office space, and a part-time secretarial salary. Patricia Tobin has been particularly helpful. She began working on this project as replies were coming in from the Latin American Studies programs and worked with me editing, typing, and preparing the indices.

CLASP/LASA SECRETARIAT NOTE

Readers will observe that we have also included a list of CLASP member institutions which did not respond to the 1973 questionnaire. We again invite them to respond, using the questionnaire bound in this Directory. Since the present Directory is already out-of-date, it is our intention to reissue it in the summer of 1976. We should therefore like it to be as complete as possible. Non-CLASP centers and programs may also be listed in the Directory either by joining CLASP or by paying a listing fee of $50.00. Please address all inquiries to the CLASP/LASA Secretariat, Box 13362 University Station, Gainesville, Florida 32604. Please also note the deadline for return of 1976 questionnaires: May 1, 1976.
